Massey-Ferguson Prenuptial Agreement

Parties came into the relationship with the expectations of nothing. Jointly they shared assets while in the relationship, offspring are excluded from benefits after the relationship is over, for this reason, they can create their own relationship without joint assets of the parents, by creating new relationships it and of itself bring new assets and responsibilities. The Parties that were the initial parties with the expectation of nothing after the relationship ends are free and clear of relational debts accrued while the relationship was in good standing by the church. Grandchildren are also excluded for this reason as well.
